DIABOLICAL DEEDS.

Wholesale Murder Attempted Near Montreal—Ranchmen Murdered by Mexican Cow Boys.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—A diabolical wholesale murder and robbery was attempted at Grand Range, three miles from this city at 2 a. m. yesterday. Grand Range is an extensive farm in suburbs owned by Ferdinand Bigras, a wealthy farmer of Lavalle county. The Manor house was occupied by him, his brother Eli, his mother, a servant and two children. At the hour named all were sleeping. Bigras was awakened by a terrific explosion to find the house crumbling about him. He escaped to find it a complete ruin. Neighbors, aroused by the explosion, came to his assistance, and the other members of the family were rescued alive from the ruins, none being fatally injured. An earthquake was first thought of but daylight showed the house had been blown up by gun powder or dynamite. The farmer is currently reported to have a large sum of money in the house.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Jos. Koon and Charles Mosley, two prominent ranchmen living near St. Heidery, of this county, were murdered Wednesday by two Mexican cowboys, named Slato Hernan and Patricio Lopez. Koon and Mosley were on their way to St. Heidery, when they were waylaid by the two Mexicans and both shot dead and robbed of a small amount of money. The murderers, immediately after committing the crime, started for the Rio Grande border. They were overtaken at Stockade by a posse of officers and both were lodged in jail. There was considerable talk of lynching, and had it not been that the jail was well guarded an attempt would have been made. Koon and Mosley were very popular and their friends are greatly excited over the assassination.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Frank Paulsen, aged fifty-five years, and a veteran of the late war, was found dead in his room last night, the victim of a most brutal and revolting murder. Charles Knoch, a former associate of the murdered man, who frequently visited him at his boarding house, No. 139 Hester street, was arrested on suspicion. He is a tall and powerful man, whose dress coincides with the description given by the murdered man's landlady of a man whom she saw coming from the house a few moments before the discovery of the crime. No motive can be ascribed for the act, as none of the murdered man's effects had been disturbed. The crime was apparently committed with an ax or an adze.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Late last night the police arrested a man on First street who was acting in a suspicious manner and holding two gold watches in his hand. When the officer attempted to arrest him he pulled an ax from under his coat and a lively fight resulted. Assistance being procurred the man was taken to the Eldridge street police station and locked up. This morning, from information obtained by the police, the man was arraigned and held on the charge of murdering Paulsen, at 139 Hester street last night. He gave his name as Frank W. Hoble, a Swede, of 290 Jefferson street. The police think he is insane.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 30.—A special from Gallipolis, Ohio, says: "Mrs. James Pike, who lives across the river from here, became incensed yesterday at a remark made by her neighbor, Charles Bippors, and taking a shot gun went to his house and killed his two children who were playing in the front yard. She has been arrested.

ARCHBISHOP TACHE.

He Issues a Memorial on the Catholic Minority in Manitoba.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 30.—The government has received a memorial from Archbishop Tache, of the Manitoba diocese, asking that the previous petition from the hierarchy requesting relief for the Catholic minority in Manitoba be considered, in that the imperial privy council in the highest court in the empire, has maintained the constitutionality of the law abolishing separate schools in Manitoba. When the question came up in the Dominion parliament the government was glad to escape the responsibility of deciding it, by referring it to the privy council and quieted the clamor on both sides by announcing that the courts of appeal would be borne by Canada. Now the matter looms up again and will doubtless cause a division in the cabinet unless some loop hole is discovered. It will no doubt have an important bearing on the succession to the commissionship, as Sir John Thompson, who is looked upon as the coming man, is a Catholic, and will no doubt side with his co-religionists. He will have to meet the strong opposition of Ontario's representatives, who were kept in the back ground during the reference to privy council, but it will now come to the front again backed up by members of parliament, not in the cabinet, who will urge them on to resist the appeals and allow no interference in Prairie Province. The catholics of Manitoba are backed up by the French of both parties in Quebec. Of course the law must stand, as there is no legal resort beyond the privy council and politicians are anxiets to see how the government will move in this weighty matter.

THURMAN'S OPINION.

Allen G. Thurman Says Hill's Speech Assures Tammany Support.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—A special from Columbus, Ohio, gives an interview with Allen G. Thurman, in which he says the speech of Senator Hill gives Cleveland the assured support of Tammany, which means that he will carry New York, and ventures his opinion that he will be elected. He characterizes the campaign as the dullest he has ever known, and denounces the force bill as a damnable measure, which should be defeated.

CHOLERA CHRONICLINGS

New York Free From It—Decreasing Elsewhere—Lively Times at Fire Island.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30. — The now hackneyed bulletine of the health board announces as usual this morning: "No cholera or symptoms of the dread disease in this city.

QUARANTINE, Sept. 30.—There were no new cases of cholera on any of the ships held in quarantine up to noon today. The Hermann, which was released by Dr Jenkins several days ago, is still at anchor off Stapleton, waiting for a release from the treasury department.

The Hamburg American steamer Gothia from Stetten arrived this morning with cargo and passengers. All well on board. The Buffalo of the Wilson line, from London, also arrived early this morning. She brought thirty passengers. All well.

FIRE ISLAND, N. Y., Sept. 30.—The provisional battalion, consisting of detachments from the Fourteenth and Forty-seventh regiments, N. G. S., N. Y., had a very busy and intensely exciting time last night. Two shots were fired by the sentries at persons who refused to pay any attention to their challenge. One intruder was arrested at 11 o'clock and lodged in the guard house. The man refused to impart any information concerning himself or his mission, except that he was connected with the life station. An investigation will be held this afternoon. Shortly after midnight another shot was heard in the vicinity of the Surf hotel, where Post No. 3 was stationed. It was an exposed part of the building and the structure at this point is composed largely of lattice work. The officers think that if any designs were entertained by the men or villagers to fire the building, this would be the spot that they were most likely to select. The soldier who fired the shot says that two strange men were challenged and that they took to their heels. The sentry then fired at their fleeing forms. Lieutenant Colbridge is much puzzled and annoyed at these nocturnal visits. He cannot explain what is meant by them and does not know whether the men are hay men or not. He says, however, that he hopes to fathom it out before breaking camp. Small detachments of men are expected from the Fourteenth and Forty-seventh regiments to relieve some of the men who must return to their work. There is as yet considerable uncertainty as to how long the troops will remain here.

HAVRE, Sept. 30.—There were three new cases and six deaths from cholera yesterday.

ODESSA, Sept. 30.—Official announcement has been made of ten cases of cholera and four deaths from the disease in this city between September 23 and 28.

LEWES, Del., Sept. 30.—Three of the crew of the British steamer Twickenham, now at the breakwater, for orders with a cargo of sugar from Havana, are down with typhus fever. The vessel is in quarantine and will be fumigated today and probably released soon.

VIENNA, Sept. 30.—There were four deaths from cholera and three new cases at Gracow, near Poland.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—It is reported that cholera has broken out in a Servian village on the Danube, having been imported by Russian vessels that stopped at the village.

CUNNING CELESTIALS

Establish Human Smuggling Joints at Detroit and Chicago—Their Game Checked.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Sam Moy's arrest at Detroit on a charge of smuggling Chinamen into the United States stirred up the Chinese quarters yesterday. Groups of prominent celestials gathered about the store of the merchant and discussed the matter. Moy Tung Chue, generally known as Hip Lung, cousin of Sam Moy, and Chow Tai, head man of the firm Bow Wo Fung, were hustling all day to secure sureties for the $5,000 bond that Commissioner Graves, of Detroit, requires for releasing Sam Moy. At a late hour his visitors were still on the hunt. At Sam Moy's place of business the arrest caused much excitement. Sam's brother talked freely of the affair and declared that the arrested merchant was engaged in no unlawful business. He expected that the First National bank would arrange about the bond. Moy was in Chicago Tuesday last. On that day he visited District Attorney Milchrist and asked many questions about the penalties for violating the exclusion act law. He said he was going to Detroit to aid in securing the release of several of his countrymen who were under arrest there for having been smuggled into the states. That Detroit has a band for the purpose of smuggling Chinamen into the states, and that it has a branch here in Chicago, the government officials here say they have no doubt. Who are at the head of the syndicate has as yet not been learned.

THE BESSEMER CAVE IN.

The Miners Still Entombed but May be Freed.

BESSEMER, Mich., Sept. 30.—At 8 o'clock last night the men caught in the cave-in were still entombed and their fellow workmen were working with might and main for their rescue. Captain Suthe, of the mine, is certain that the cave-in has not molested the room in which the entombed miners are supposed to be and that they are all safe. Hundreds of men, women and children were gathered at the shaft house eagerly waiting for news of the men below. The wives of Johnson, Thompson and the two Donahans were at the mouth of the pit and the grief and fearful suspense had well nigh driven them insane.

THE FIGHT WAS STOPPED.

The Referee Stops a Prize Fight at the Fifty-sixth Round.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 30.—At the end of the fifty-sixth round the referee stopped the Smith-Siddons fight and received the decision. The men were then walking around each other doing nothing. The fight was considerable of a disappointment. Smith's friends had confidently expected to see him win in short order. Siddons was severely punished about the body, but his coolness and superb foot work saved him. Smith were himself out rushing the plucky New Yorker.

A FEARFUL EXPLOSION.

A Boiler in the Pittsburg Carbon Iron Works Explodes and Does Several Thousand Dollars Damage.

PITTSBURG, PA., Sept.—At 7:10 o'clock this morning, just after the night turn had left the mill and before the day turn had reported for work, two large boilers in the carbon iron works at Thirty second and Smallman streets, exploded with terrific force, scattering sections of the boilers, bricks, etc., throughout the mill, in which several hundred men are employed during working hours. The mill was also filled with scalding steam and natural gas which escaped from the broken pipes and then exploded, causing nearly as much damage to building and machinery as did the collapse of the boilers. The damage to the works will aggregate several thousand dollars. No one was killed and so far as is known no persons was seriously injured The narrow escape from a terrible calamity is remarkable.

Six or seven cars were smashed and the wreckage piled twenty feet high. Two car loads of hogs, two car loads of grapes, a car carrying three bloodied horses belonging to H. M. Whitier, of Boston, and two carloads of cotton, leather and general merchandise were in the wreck. One of the horses was instantly killed and the other two were so badly injured that they had to be shot. Twenty or more hogs were killed and many more were so badly injured that they had to be killed. A man named Ayer, who was in charge of the horses, was thrown twenty feet into a coal car on a side track and was so badly bruised that he had to be taken to the hospital.

The singers who had been engaged for the western tour will start for their destination next week.

CLEVELAND IN NEW YORK.

He Arrived at 7 O'clock This Morning and Stopped at the Victoria.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland, accompanied by Mr. R. W. Gilder, editor of the Century, Mr. Charles F. Chichester and Daniel J. Griffin arrived on the Fall River boat Pilgrim at 7 o'clock this morning. After landing, the party was driven to the Victoria hotel.

Callers began to arrive early at the hotel and kept coming all day. Most of the members of the democratic national campaign committee are in the city and this afternoon all the members of the state committee will be here. Nearly all of them will see Mr. Cleveland during the day. Shortly before 10 a. m. ex-Mayor Grace called at the hotel and remained closeted with Mr. Cleveland for fully an hour. Shortly after the ex-mayor's arrival Don M. Dickinson, of the democratic national campaign committee, sent up his card. Cleveland's room. It is understood that the local situation and the proposition to run an independent local democratic ticket was discussed. Mr. Grace, however, when asked by a reporter of the United Press if it was true that the conference had relation to the nominating of a third local ticket, said that the local situation was not mentioned, adding, "It would not embarass Mr. Cleveland by asking him to express an opinion as to a third ticket." Many members of the state committee are in town. The committee will meet at the Hoffman house tonight to nominate a candidate for the office of chief judge of the court of appeals. The members of the committee can not be quoted as to whose nomination they favored, but some of them admitted that Judge Peckham would probably get the nomination It was stated that the stay of Mr. Cleveland in town would be short and that he would return to Buzzard's Bay next week to bring his family here. Replying to a note of inquiry sent to him by a reporter of the United Press, Mr. Cleveland stated that, as yet, he had made no arrangement with regard to making speeches during the present campaign. He did not know whether he would make speeches or not; he might, possibly, but no positive arrangements had been made up to the present. He did not know just how he would employ his time during his stay here.

CALLED A LIAR.

The City Council at Omaha Investigates Charges of Boodling.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 30.—The session held last night of the special city council investigating charges of boodling connected with the construction of the new city hall ended in riotous fashion. Mayor Bemis on the witness stand refused to say who it was that told him that the architect of the city hall, Biendorff, had paid $2,000 to defeat Lianinger, republican candidate for mayor two years ago and also refused to give names of parties who had said the present committee was a sidetrack affair. The committee insisted that the mayor should give names and was told by the chairman that he was plain Mr. Bemis on the witness stand and not the mayor. City Attorney Conell was called a liar by a councilman. They were prevented from fighting by the chairman. Great disorder prevailed and bitter accusations were made by members against the attorney and the mayor. The latter finally called the police, who ordered these present to disperse, but no arrests were made.

AN INHUMAN FATHER.

He Assaults His Neighbor's Twelve-Year-Old Daughter.

PRAIRIE GROVE, Ark., Sept 30.—News has been received here of an atrocious outrage on a twelve-year-old girl at Winslow, eighteen miles from here, yesterday morning. A man named Bill Wilkey, married and father of three children, criminally assaulted the little daughter of a neighbor. He escaped, but later in the day was captured by a posse of neighbors. They secured a physician and at the muzzles of their winchesters compelled him to emasculate the rapist.

GOT THE LAW'S LIMIT.

Erastus McCarthy is Sent to the Pen for Five Years for a Fiendish Crime.

Erastus McCarthy, who formerly resided in this city, and who was a well known character, having frequently figured in the courts in difficulties which he had with his wife has got into difficulty and into prison at Indianapolis, to which city he removed some time ago, as will be seen by the following telegram from Indianapolis:

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 30.—Erastus McCarthy, who recently came here from Fort Wayne, was found guilty yesterday of criminal intimacy with both his daughters, aged fifteen and seventeen years. He was sentenced to five years' imprisonment. It developed during the trial that the last legislature, in amending the law governing incest, unintentionally reduced the maximum punishment from fourteen to five years, hence the mild dose which the brute received. The family is pitifully poor, and the girls told a story of wretchedness and ill-treatment that shocked the court and jury.

WHALEN BOUND OVER.

Justice Ryan was engaged today in hearing the case of the state against Dug Whalen, who was accused of having embezzled $20, the money of Wm. Bowers, an employe of Moss Ryan Trucking company. COURT CULLINGS.

The justices are doing but little business.

James T. Leary and Alice Hughs have been licensed to wed.

Justice Daniel Ryan presided at police court this morning, Mayor Zollinger being at Chicago on official business. There was only one drunk, John Maher, and he was sent to jail.

The superior court is transacting routine business. Next Monday the new jury will come in. The first case to be tried will be that of George Herman against the Connecticut Insurance company, and then the case of Emmeliser against Yoquelet and Herman against the Wabash Railroad company will be heard. The court cases to be tried will be Webber against Webber and two other cases.

In the circuit court at Columbus, Ind., John C. Nugent brought suit for $25,000 for personal injuries received while in the employment of the Pennsylvania railroad company as brakeman. Six months ago he was caught in a rear end collision on a bridge over White river at that place, and lost an ear and his right leg, and was thrown to the sand-bar below the bridge, where he came near losing his life from the burning train above.

Deputy Sheriff McCormick, of Laporte, arrested Clarence Rittenhour as an accomplice of Truman Wilkinson, the all-round thief whom he captured in Starke county several days ago. A visit to the scene of the thieves disclosed a new tent, a couple of hunting suits, a lot of ammunition and various other articles, which the prisoner says belongs to Chicago sporting men.

BRAVE PATRICK MITCHELL

Prevents a Fearful Holocaust and is Severely Injured.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 30.—The Buena Vista hotel, a two story frame building at the corner of Sixth and Lawrence streets, was destroyed by fire at 3 o'clock this morning. Gustavo Kearse, a lodger, perished in the flames and Anna Gudes-son, A. McDonall and Tom Arnold were severely burned. The later may die. The flames appeared simultonously in several parts of the building and only the brave work of Patrick Mitchell, who first awoke, saved those who escaped. The forty lodgers were quickly aroused and they had to jump from the windows, as the stairways were impassable. In twenty minutes after the fire was discovered the structure was in ruins. Mitchell, whose bravery saved a score of lives, broke both arms and both legs in leaping from a veranda when his work had been accomplished. The hotel was an old land mark. The loss will amount to $2,500.

SHERMAN SPEAKS.

Reiterates His Well-Known Views on Tariff and Silver Questions at North Fairfield, Ohio.

NORTH FAIRFIELD, Ohio, Sept. 30.—Senator Sherman's speech in this old village of the line of any railroad was an event designed especially for the former. It was an all day farm festival with political sauce, and it called out all the leading republicans of Huron county. There was much curiosity about what Sherman would say, because the congressional contest in this district is very bitter, and while it is strongly republican, there is some fear that M. D. Harter may endanger the election of E. G. Johnson, the republican candidate, by giving preference to Johnson's bitter abuse of Sherman in the editorial columns of his paper before and after the senatorial contest. The weather is delightful and the attendance large. When the senator arose to speak he was greeted by wild cheers from the crowd.

Mr. Sherman spoke at length on the tariff and currency, reiterating his well known views on these subjects. Coming to the congressional contest he said: "And now, fellow citizens, something as to your local politics and I am done. You are to elect a member of congress to carry out your views in national policy. Now you know the republican platform as well as I do. It agrees with his party and with you. You must know that the democratic candidate is not in sympathy with your great controlling questions. His views on the tariff—on the subject of free trade and a protective tariff—are exactly opposite of yours. I know him personally. He is my neighbor and my friend, but I have no hesitation in saying to you that I cannot vote for him. Nor do I concur in the views of Mr. Harter as to state banks as I understand him. He introduced one or more bills in the house of representatives to enable the state to charter banks to issue notes. I believe that circulating notes issued by state banks are forbidden by the constitution of the United States. And, aside from this, I believe they are vicious in principle, and dangerous in practice. I do not object to them as banks of deposit or exchange, but as banks of issue they are in plain opposition to the higher and avowed principles of the republican and democratic parties. As to the silver question. I wish heartily to commend the action of Mr. Harter. Upon this both parties were divided and he took the right side and maintained it with vigor and ability. I believe that Mr. Johnson will faithfully represent your opinion and convictions as a republican on all the questions, and therefore is entitled to your vote."

A NEW INDUSTRY

To Be Started Which Will Employ Fifty Men.

Dr. D. D. Weisell and Frank D. Edmunds are about to manufacture their new repeating bell in wholesale lots. Dr. Weisell, manager of the safety valve works, has been manufacturing them until these gentlemen could make preparations. Dr. Weisell is now in the east in the interest of the invention. The company will probably locate here, though they have had some very flattering offers from other places. They expect to employ at least fifty hands at the start. A large number of orders have been received and it will take steady employment to fill them.

ELECTRIC EXTENSION.

Much Interest Shown Over the Proposed Extension

Of the Electric Railway to Maysville and Hicksville—A Rousing Meeting at Maysville Last Night.

The first step toward the construction of the Maysville electric railroad, which is to be an extension of the electric lines of this city, was taken last evening and there are good indications now that the road will be built.

The people of Maysville and vicinity became interested in the project some time ago, H. E. Adams, a prominent citizen of that place, taking an active part in the promotion of the enterprise. Mr. Adams succeeded in interesting C. B. Woodworth and others of this city, and a number of these gentlemen went to Maysville yesterday afternoon to look over the field and talk with the citizens. The party consisted of Messrs. C. B. Woodworth, Thomas Empie, John W. Hayden, Chas. Sigmund, Clyde Tinkham, H. W. McMullen, of the Gazette, and C. S. Woodworth and G. E. McCulloch, of The Sentinel.

An enthusiastic meeting was held in Grand hall in Maysville evening and a large number of the leading Maysville and Hicksville people were present. In the absence of John Stover, whom the assembly had previously chosen chairman, Dr. F. K. Cosgrove was selected.

On taking the chair Dr. Cosgrove stated the object of the meeting and said that in order that the scheme be a success the people should not only show an interest but must use their influence as well. All felt the necessity of speedier means of communication with Fort Wayne, and of better means of transportation. That the proposed route is extremely favorable on account of natural advantages of construction, and the communications which can be made with other towns and cities, as the lines once started can be readily extended. The value of the land would also be greatly increased and there would be a greater production and an increase of wealth on account of more accessible markets. The advantage to Fort Wayne would be great, as the large cities have their subsidiary lines of railroads, which are one of the sources of convenience and profit to the people.

The doctor's speech was forcibly delivered and was listened to with great interest. At its conclusion he introduced J. W. Hayden, of this city, who said: "Fort Wayne is not like some western cities that spring up in a day and as rapidly die down. It is a city of solid and steady growth, and Maysville should be doubled in another decade. Its topographical situation makes it a railroad center for lines running east and west, but localities to the north and south are isolated from good railroad communications. The district through which the proposed road will go is one of the richest in the state, and it is only a matter of very short time, three years at least, when a railroad will be built through it. The cost of travel and transportation to and from Fort Wayne is greater on account of the toll gates than it would be by railroad, and consequently the people do not haul to the natural market. Maysville is one of the characteristics of the present age, especially of western cities, and the road would be one of the means of establishing residential towns to Fort Wayne. Above all, a good, solid road that would do for either electricity or steam, should be built."

Chas. Sigmund, representing the company interested, was then introduced. He said that a capital stock of $300,000 would be necessary as there were twenty miles of road which would cost $7,000 per mile. Three power houses and twelve cars would be needed and these would run the cost up to $250,000, not counting wages of employes to run the cars. Whenever $100,000 can be raised work will be commenced and the other $200,000 be paid when the work is finished. Shares will be $50 a piece. At the conclusion of Mr. Sigmund's remarks a committee consisting of Dr. C. W. Swift, Charles Grubb and Aaron Reichelderfer was appointed to go among the people and see how these propositions would be received and report at a later day.

The following is a list of the names of the people who are in favor of the road: Maysville—W. J. Hays, Vinton Jones, Al Olmstead, Dr. J. H. Omo, Wm and Aaron Reichelderfer, Willis Emminger, Jacob Amstutz, Charles H. Higgins, Charles Starr, Jesse Price, H. E. Adams, C. S. Swift, Thomas Hood, O. Minnick, George James, Dr. F. A. Compere, Marion Cumming, Henry Hood, William Ringwald, Isaac Dresbach, Joseph D. Cummins, Morton Foote, Martin Horn.

Hicksville—Francis Parker and W. F. Horton, manager of the electric light company at Hicksville.

Hall's Corner—David Nelson, George Wan, George Snyder, W. H. Ringwald, Isaac Scisinger Killion, John Knapp, Richard Price and George Eager.

Some of the farmers are Morgan Widderfield, Tony Snyder, Frank Wertz, Peter Amstoaks, Frank Monroe, Sam Miller, Noah Farner and A. M. Taylor. It is reported that Mr. Taylor said he would give $500 to have the road go through.

When completed the road will extend to Hicksville, Ohio, which is a short distance southeast of Maysville. When complete the road will be some twenty-two miles in length.

The golden days of October will be here tomorrow.

The democratic railroad club held a largely attended meeting last night.

Hon. Jere Overmeyer, of Jennings, ex-chairman of the republican state central committee, is stumping for the democracy in southern Indiana.

It is generally understood that if the democrats succeed in again securing the New York legislature, the Hon. W. Bourke Cockran will be chosen United States senator, to succeed Mr. Hiscock.

A United States inspector made a general examination of the northern prison the other day and commended the prison as the cleanest and best kept that he had visited. He made a proposition that all United States prisoners be kept there, which is being considered by the prison authorities.

When Dr. Pierson, who is soon to take charge of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Spurgeon's old church, reached his decision he sent a unique cablegram of acceptance to the Rev. James Spurgeon. It read simply, "Philemon, 22—Pierson." The verse reads: "But withal prepare me also a lodging; for I trust that through your prayers I shall be given unto you."

By the stoppage of immigration the steamship companies are losing thousands of dollars every week. One company places its loss on steerage passengers alone at $80,000 each trip. This shows why the agents of these companies scour Europe to secure immigrants. There is an immense profit in bringing them over; in fact, their passage is almost wholly a clear gain, as they are practically no expense to the ship carrying them.

Democrats should remember that moving from one township to another at this time works a forfeiture of the right to vote. All men who have changed their residence, and in so doing have moved across a township line, since September 9, are not entitled to vote in the coming election, and if any democrat considers the question of residence, he should, if at all possible, postpone moving until November 8. After October 9 a change from one precinct to another costs a man his vote.

The democrats are having interesting meetings throughout the county. Last night there were six political meetings and all of them were largely attended. Judge Allen Zollars and Mr. E. F. Colvert were at Monroeville, Hon. J. M. Robinson and E. V. Emrick spoke at Aboit Center, Hon. S. M. Foster and Hon. J. T. Rodabaugh were at Pleasant Center, Hon. J. M. Barrett and Judge Dawson were at Milan Center, Hon. S. M. Hench, P. M. Schieden and Charles Muhler, jr., were at St. Joe Center, Judge Edward O'Rourke and Tom Hagen were at Lake Center.

The New York Herald's estimate of Grover Cleveland's letter of acceptance will strike the average citizen as being about the correct thing. "The letter," that paper says, "has the merit of comparative brevity, being hardly half the length of Mr. Harrison's. It is not an argument, but a statement. It is not a ringing document, but a calm summary of views in plain language that will appeal to and doubtless influence the thinking masses. In style and tenor it is an improvement on former deliverances. The letter cannot fail to give general satisfaction to Mr. Cleveland's supporters, and his enemies have but little chance to pick flaws. It is a document that will stand the test of criticism. As a campaign document it can be utilized to advantage."

It appears that the democrats of Ohio, apparently resting on their oars and absolutely doing nothing, have for weeks been quietly at work perfecting their organization and making steady inroads on the enemy. All of a sudden the republicans awake to a realization of the true condition of things, and now they are "humping" to make up for lost time. Instead of allowing their speakers to go into other states, word has been passed along the line informing the workers and stumpers that Ohio is in danger and that henceforth they must be up and doing to avoid defeat.

The campaigners say that the present contest recalls that of 1860, when Abraham Lincoln was elected. Every day, says the Chicago Times, men who have been identified with the dominant party under old issues forswear their allegiance and take an active part in securing the defeat of their old friends. This is preeminently a time when thinking men exercise their mental faculties without regard to party ties. And this condition is one that brings uneasiness to a political organization that flourished only because of its leaders' ability to deceive the people with false promises and constant stirring of the dead issues of the war.

Tim Gazette of this morning published a letter or certificate by one James Stokes, who says that he is a tinner by trade, has worked at the business fifteen years and is now junior member of the firm of Stokes, Glasper & Co., Elwood, Ind. Mr. Stokes says: "We use Elwood tin and find it fully equal to imported tin of the same grades. We do not pay as much for the American tin as we did for the imported." In their eagerness to justify the law that has already compelled consumers of this plate to pay $15,000,000 in duties, these tin plate liars protest too much. If we are making tin plate as good as the imported and at a lower price, what is the need of a high duty? And if the enormously high wages claimed to be paid to the Welchmen at Elwood do not prevent making tin of a lower cost than the poorly paid Welchmen in Wales can make it at, how about a duty to offset the difference in wages?

Church Lotteries.

The lottery evil has within the last few years been lessened, to a great extent, but there yet remains a tendency among certain churches, among them church societies, to introduce the game of chance for the purpose of raising funds for worthy purposes. In regard to this reprehensible practice a writer in the Youth's Companion has this to say:

"It is related on the authority of known records that when a highly respectable educational institution in New Jersey was founded, one hundred years ago, it was thus established. A lavern where much rum-drinking was permitted. Money was raised by means of a lottery to erect its first building, and a slave was sold to furnish funds to hire one of its teachers. Pious men assisted in the foundation of the academy in this way. They did not think that they were doing wrong. But the experience that all men have gained since that day has led public sentiment to condemn drinking-saloons as unchristianizing and to abolish slavery and to recognize lotteries as evil and hurtful influences.

"The lottery, as a means of raising money for good purposes, has not yet, it is true, disappeared. It is often supposed that, where the funds which it produces go for some purpose of public benefit, it is proper to resort to it. However, a great gain in this direction has been made. Thinking men are recognizing the fact that the lottery in any form is a kind of gambling, and that gambling for a sacred purpose is certainly no more to be approved than gambling for private purposes.

"Churches preach by example sometimes more effectively than in any other way. Since this is the case, can it be denied that in a sense they are preaching gambling when they use lotteries to raise funds for their own purposes? The opposite lesson is surely needed from them, the example of refraining from any proceeding which is so closely associated with evil as lottery gambling."

The Only One of His Kind.

Big men seem to abound more or less in all callings, but in one art in this country there is a man who seems never to have a peer. That man is Clark, the maker of great telescope glasses. The senior is dead, the elder son is dead and the younger is fifty-five or sixty years old. So Prof. Todd, of Amherst college, suggests that if this biggest telescope of all is to be made somebody had better give Clark the order before it is too late. Prof. Todd discourages investment for great glasses for government or for colleges that more than one would be made of them by college explorers in celestial fields. He thinks the twenty-six-inch glass at Washington large enough for its location and uses. Lick gives to a thirty-six-inch glass. Prof. Todd says that if Clark could get the necessary glass discs he would take a contract to make a four-foot or five-foot telescope in two or three years, probably for $125,000 to $150,000.

The Maine fishermen spread a table on board their vessels that would surprise the average person. Barrels of cabbage, turnip, sweetcorn, fish, meats, canned goods, etc., are included in the list, and the fact of the articles necessary for a first-class hotel are found in the pantry. Though they handle immense quantities of fish, neither on board nor at their homes does it often appear.

A well-known citizen of Troy, N. Y., who always summers in his native place, Bennington, Vt., is having his own grave dug in the beautiful cemetery in Bennington Center. He is in perfect health, but desires to have his permanent house built under his own supervision.

Where Columbus Landed.

With the Columbian exposition so near at hand, everything authentic pertaining to the great discoverer is of special interest. The celebrated traveler and canitarian, Felix L. Oswald, in writing of the Bahama Islands for a recent issue of Good Health, furnishes this interesting paragraph:

"It has been said that the world does not know its great men, and it is strangely apt to neglect the mementoes of those it professes to know. The greatest masterpieces of ancient art have been lost as completely as the original text of the Buddhist Scriptures; neither the birthplace nor the tomb of Columbus is positively known, and the Spaniards omitted to erect as much as a memorial mound on the spot where the great discoverer first planted the banner of Castile on the soil of the new world. 'Cat Key,' the name of a crescent-shaped ledge of cliffs, was long supposed to be a synonym of San Salvador, but it has since been proved that the name is comparatively new. The cliffs from the east could not fail to come first in sight of another 'key,' and there seems little doubt that Pinzon's shout of 'Land!' referred to a high reef known as Point Isleganda, and that Columbus landed in a bay half a mile north of that reef, on the northeast coast of Watling island."

Contrary to Servants.

A discussion is now raging in England which was precipitated by a young man, a bachelor with an establishment, who wrote to his journal the embarrassment he suffered when he met his maid servants abroad. How shall he salute them, for he cannot cut out of doors those who smilingly serve him within? Thus complaining, he regrets that the good old days when the maid courtesied and the master noticed it or passed on, according to his mood. He confesses if it were possible he would gladly cross the road when he sees one of his household approaching, to avoid the meeting, but he is afraid. This young man's predicament has brought out suggestions of all sorts from his fellow creatures, except the maids, whose desires, opinions, or feelings in the matter have not been considered, for by the master should hesitate to say: "Mary Ann," with a bow, "it's a fine morning, Mary Ann; been after eggs, Mary Ann?" or as it may be, and pass on. It is difficult to see. It is easy enough to fashion a difference of position by a fine assumption that there is no difference of position.

In giving her opinion of men Frances E. Willard places the following estimate on the man who in his dealings with others is always guided by a true sense of honor, and it is, to say the least, placed none too high:

"I never see an honorable man upon the street without thinking how much we owe to him for simply being what he is. The character and habitudes of such a man bring more protection than police or courts can ever give; bring safeguards that watchman and burglar alarm could never realize. On the clear eye, the untainted breath, the clean hand, the modest demeanor, the chastity of spirit of such a man stand a barrier between the home and its greatest enemy, and deserve the honest homage of every woman's heart. Such a man makes it easier for every mother to bring up her boy in the temptest years of the first score of years. And for the very atmosphere he breathes is one of purity, of manliness and self-respect."

False Impressions.

Some people are prone to relate as facts things which have only impressed them as being well grounded, without the trouble of personal investigation. This practice often leads to doubt as to their veracity. Impressions may be a result of knowledge or they may be counted as a substitute for knowledge. The general impression that a certain place is noteworthy, but he is not quite sure for what; another man has read so much about that place that his impressions of it are hardly less vivid than if he had lived in it. An impression that is not based on knowledge may be as positive as one that is; but in the one case the impression has a basis of fact, and in the other case it is only an impression. If we are impressed with anything as a thing of value, it would be well for us to ask ourselves why we are so impressed.

Richard Vaux, for half a century prison-inspector for Pennsylvania, describes idleness and the want of knowledge of a trade as the principal causes of crime. Of the ten hundred and fifty-five inmates of one prison, but three had learned a trade. The labor unions composed largely of foreigners are responsible for this condition. They saw that with a supply of skilled young Americans coming forward they could not maintain a tyranny which would have made it practically impossible for one to enter a trade as apprentice. The trade schools unfortunately do not reach the great body of prospective laborers.

One of the finest distinctions possible was conferred on Dr. Hamilton Wilcox, who, belonged to the army of resolutely busy American housewives, whose chief pride is their work. She begrudged sadly the time spent in enforced idleness on Sunday. And she also suggests that if the biggest telescope of all is to be made somebody had better give Clark the order before it is too late. Prof. Todd discourages investment for great glasses for government or for colleges that more than one would be made of them by college explorers in celestial fields. He thinks the twenty-six-inch glass at Washington large enough for its location and uses. Lick gives to a thirty-six-inch glass. Prof. Todd says that if Clark could get the necessary glass discs he would take a contract to make a four-foot or five-foot telescope in two or three years, probably for $125,000 to $150,000.

A PLASTER OF PATIENCE.

At times when the world seems to go all contrary,
And I feel the need of some comforting cheer,
I take the advice of my neighbor, Miss Mary:
"Tie 'Put on a plaster of patience, my dear."

You know how one feels when the back begins aching,
So glad if a quick healing plaster is near;
And so when there's fear that the heart may be breaking,
Just "put on a plaster of patience, my dear."

If Bridget should tell you that she must be leaving,
Or guests unexpected to-day should appear;
Or, worse, if you fear that your friends are deceiving,
Then, "put on a plaster of patience, my dear."

For all of the aches and pains of each sorrow,
There's nothing that equals this sound queer;
And so, if you'd like to be better to-morrow,
Just "put on a plaster of patience, my dear."

If ever the world seems to go all contrary,
And you feel the need of some comforting cheer,
Just take the advice of my neighbor, Miss Mary,
And "put on a plaster of patience, my dear."

THE WOMAN IN BLACK.

An Engineer's Strange Story of a Little Moth.

Traveling recently from Chicago to New York, I found in the morning upon crawling out of my berth that the train was standing stock still. The porter told me that it had been standing thus for an hour and a half, while I had been sleeping the sleep of the just.

"Freight train done stopped right on de track ahead," said the porter. "I reckon we don' get out o' here under anudder hour or two."

I dressed and peeped out and saw we were alongside the platform of a country station. I took a good breakfast in the dining car and then went out to stroll up and down the platform.

Presently I went to the locomotive and stopped to admire it. There is nothing much better to look at for that matter, than the locomotive of one of these through express trains on the great trunk lines. How it throbs as it stands, straining with pent-up power, as if impatient to leap away at fearful speed!

This one was hissing fiercely, while the measured thud of the air pump sounded as if it might be the regular breathing of a sleeping giant.

In the cab sat the engineer alone, waiting. I stopped and gossiped with him a moment about the engine. Then I offered him a cigar, which he took, with thanks, and asked me to come in. I swung myself into his cab.

The engineer—a bright, pleasant-faced man, about forty years old—explained to me the uses of the numerous valves and levers about him. They were all as bright and shining as polish could make them, for the engineer is as proud of his engine as any housewife is of the neatness of her dwelling. I glanced at the two shining steam-gauges with the clock between them, and then I noticed what seemed to be an ordinary white moth, mounted in a gilt frame, hanging against the wall of the cab.

"Is that for ornament?" I asked, pointing at the moth.

The engineer smiled. "Well, partly for ornament," he said, "but a good deal more for sentiment. I put that moth there because it saved my life and the lives of two hundred and fifty people as well."

"How in the world could an insect save human lives?" I asked.

"Well, I'll tell you, if you want to hear the story. I reckon there's time enough before we're able to get out of this."

I settled myself in the absent fireman's seat, and prepared to listen.

"It wasn't such a long time ago," said the engineer; "only a year ago last spring. I was running this very train, and had this very engine—old 416. My fireman was Jim Meadows, a fine fellow I'm got now. You can see him over there, leaning up against the telegraph office.

"Jim is a good boy, but he is very superstitious; believes in ghosts, dreams and warnings. I used to laugh at his fancies, but I don't make so much fun of him as I did—not since we saw the woman in black.

"We were scheduled to leave Milton about one o'clock in the morning, and to arrive in S—— at about six. On the night when this thing took place a fearful storm of wind and rain had been raging steadily ever since sundown, and was at the height of its fury when I started for the round-house.

"It was about midnight, and the wind seemed to sweep clear around and through the building. It was terribly dismal. Jim was there, and the storm was all ready, in our oil-skin and rubber clothes on. I ran the machine down to the station. Our train, the vestibule limited, was already there. I gave the engine a thorough oiling, and made sure that all was in order.

"As we sat in the cab we could hear the storm raging outside. There was rain, driven by the gusts of wind, beat fiercely against the windows.

"'It's going to be a bad run, Frank,' Jim said. 'I wish we were in S—— safe and sound.'

"I laughed. 'What makes you so terribly glum, Jim?' I asked.

"'Oh,' said he, 'I just feel creepy somehow. Seems like there's something terrible going to happen. I can feel it in my bones.'

"I laughed again. 'You got a little wet coming over, I guess, Jim,' said I. 'And the sound of the wind isn't very encouraging, that's a fact.'

"'I'm tell the truth I was a little nervous myself, notwithstanding my easy way of treating Jim's notions.

"Presently our train came in, long and heavy, consisting mainly of sleepers. It used to make me nervous to know that the lives and happiness of my fellow-men were in my keeping, but now I think nothing of it. That night I was nervous. What if the frightful storm had made the track unsafe, and if a rail had been loosened by the settling of the track somewhere? On these fast trains a man must rely on having a clear track, or he is lost. In order to make schedule time, he must run at such a speed that often he cannot see a signal light ahead. Rattling over switches, past signal lights and between long lines of cars, till, with a roar and rumble, we rushed over the long bridge and away through the hills, waking their slumbering echoes with our shrill whistle.

"Then a pulse of steam would open, and the clank and roar soon settled into a hum, for old 419 was doing her best, and we were making fifty miles an hour.

"The darkness was intense save where the headlight, an electrical device, cast its funnel of light into the gloom. Jim had a hot fire, and kept steam up to a high pressure, so that we fairly flew on past sleeping hamlets and still farmhouses.

"About our first watering station I made sure that all was working smoothly, while Jim inspected the headlight. The operator handed out the orders which showed that the road was clear as far as our next stopping place. On we went.

"The darkness grew more intense, if possible, while the wind shrieked by. The rain became more blinding, till nothing could be distinguished in the gray murk which enveloped us.

"Suddenly, through the mist and rain, I saw, looming right before us, the gigantic figure of a woman wrapped in a long, black mantle, which seemed to flutter in the wind. She waved great spectral arms about in swift, twisting movements. As I sat, looking in horror, the figure vanished with a final wave of her arms.

"I was too much astonished and stupefied to make a move of my hand toward the throttle. At that moment Jim had been bending over the fire. As he looked up he exclaimed:

"'Hullo, Frank, what's up? You look as if you had seen a ghost!'

"I did not answer. My mind was too full of that strange figure I had seen.

"We were now nearing Rock creek, where there is a trestle over a deep stream. I felt more nervous than ever.

"We dashed around the curve and whizzed by Rock Creek station, which is only a mile from the trestle. As we passed I glanced at the steamgauge for an instant.

"A cry from Jim caused me to turn quickly toward him. He sat rigid, his eyes large and staring, his jaw dropped, the very picture of terror.

"He pointed with a shaking finger out into the darkness. I turned and looked, and then began to shake myself.

"There, on the track, was that same hideous figure of a woman, outlined on the background of light from the engine, now motionless, now whirling in a witch dance, but all the time motioning us back.

"'Frank,' gasped Jim, but scarcely above a whisper, 'don't go over that trestle! Don't go on. Can't we stop? Don't go till you're sure it's safe!'

"I suppose I was pretty badly scared. At any rate, I put on the air-brake for all I was worth. I couldn't have resisted the impulse to stop the train.

"As we came to a stop, I could hear the roar of the water in Rock creek right ahead. I stepped out of the cab, and met the conductor coming up.

"'What's the matter? What's the matter?' he asked, impatiently.

"I felt decidedly foolish. There was no gigantic woman to be seen now. Nothing could be made out more than a few feet away in the blinding storm.

"'Well,' said I, 'we've seen something. I don't know what it is—seemed like it was a great black ghost—that was waving its arms and warning us not to go forward.'

The conductor looked at me curiously. 'Are you crazy, Frank?' he said. 'I should think you were. But we're so near the trestle we'll take a look at it.'

"We took our lanterns and went ahead, leaving Jim with the engine. He looked scared all over. But I tell you we have not gone five rods before we stopped in horror.

"There at our feet lay a black chasm, filled with the roar of the river, as swollen with the spring rains it dashed down toward the lake. The bridge was washed away!

"Only a few splinters of wood and twisted iron clung to the abutment, while now, far out over the blackness, that awful black figure was plainly outlined again on the thin air, reflected against the shaft of light that the headlight threw.

"It was flinging its arms about as if in wild glee.

"The conductor stared at the chasm and then at me.

"'Was that the thing you saw when you stopped the train?' he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'Well, it's something more than luck that saved us to-night, Frank.'

"We went back slowly to the train, feeling very queer, and thankful, too, I can assure you. Several of the passengers had come running forward at this time. Among them was a young fellow from Chicago, about eighteen years old, who seemed more than the whole of us, as it turned out.

"When this boy saw the woman in black, he turned and looked at the locomotive headlight. There was a pull up toward it. I looked at it as he did so. I saw a peculiar spot on the glass.

"'There's your woman in black!' said the Chicago boy.

"'And there it was, sure enough—that same moth miller that you see there in that frame. He was clinging to the inside of the glass. As I tapped on the glass, the creature flew back and lighted on the reflector.

"That's the whole story, sir. The moth, by fluttering in the light and in front of the electric illuminator, had produced a great black shadow, like that of a cloaked woman, on the darkness in front of us. The beast was long in its wings in his vain attempt to sail out through the glass, he gave his mysterious shadow the look of waving its arms wildly.

"Then when he flew back out of the direct shine of the light, the figure disappeared, of course.

"We never knew just how he got in there, but no doubt it happened when Jim went to fix the light at the pumping-station.

"Anyhow, he saved our lives by scaring us with that woman in black.

"So you see why I keep the moth in the frame. It's a reminder to me of the way we were saved that night. Yes, you might call it accidental, but I call it providential."

"All aboard," called the conductor of the limited, coming out of the telegraph office with a paper in his hand.

Jim, the fireman, ran and jumped into the cab as I did, and we began to go back to my car.—Frederic P. Potter, in Youth's Companion.

One of Georgia's Queer Characters.

A queer old man was the late Judge Elam, of Rome, Ga. He once boasted that he spent only ninety cents a month for food, and that was for corn and milk, pour a little sugar in it to make it sweet, and eat my corn bread with it." In addition to this equally plain, wearing in the summer time a long linen duster and a white canvas hat and carrying a faded cotton umbrella he presented a queer figure as he walked and white and, with his snowy hair, gave him the aspect of a patriarch. His law office, bedroom, dining-room and all were embraced in a little box by ten foot apartment in the Masonic temple, and in the absence of a boll he slept on the floor. Elam had been a confederate soldier, a member of the Georgia legislature, and in his later years a justice of the peace. His notions of the law sometimes conflicted with those of superior judges and he once came near going to jail for contempt of court, having, in an official paper, referred to Judge Underwood as "Underwooden." At another time, in a case before the supreme court, Judge Elam concluded his brief with the statement: "These are the facts in the case, and if they don't gain it let her rip." He won the suit.—N. Accompanied by several of the leading capitalists and real estate men of the city, he visited the proposed site for the depot, on south Calhoun street, in the afternoon, and investigated some of the matters regarding the right of way of the new road.

The boys of the Pittsburg blacksmith shops tell a good joke on one of their number, John Slater. Mr. Slater, who is very bald headed, attended the organization of the republican railroad club Wednesday night and during the selection of officers became much afraid that he would be chosen as one. He said that when it came to the election of treasurer his hair stood on end.

An engineer of the Louisville and New Albany railroad is responsible for one of the most novel world's fair schemes yet formulated. His idea is to lease a piece of land near the exposition grounds, Chicago, and build a railway track a mile in circumference, with another track inside, both to be connected by switches. Around one side of the track he would build an amphitheater with a seating capacity of 100,000 people. On these tracks he would place two locomotives. He would start these two engines in opposite directions and when in full speed the connecting switches would be thrown open and the locomotives allowed to collide. To make the collision more realistic he would have the engineers jump just in time to save their lives. It is the opinion that the railroad wreck would be an attractive spectacle. He says he can furnish an entertainment of this sort for $2,500 a performance about twice a week. It is his idea to use abandoned locomotives, which can be bought cheap, and he says that the beauty of the project lies in the fact that this is an easy and profitable way to break the old locomotives to pieces and get the old iron.

The advantages that would arise from women being allowed to participate in the duties and emoluments of railway directors have been brought forward in England, not, as might have been imagined, in any journal of extreme views, but in a leader in the Times. There can be no doubt whatever that the serious and loudly repeated complaints that have been made in the daily papers respecting the disgraceful want of the accommodation for women at the railway stations would not have been required had they any voice whatever in the management of railway companies. That gross abuses of the kind should have been perpetuated as they have been for so many years, with no attempt on the part of the managers of the great railways to remedy the evils, is but too well known, but that nothing should have been done or promised until a woman had the courage to write to the Times and call attention to the disgraceful state of things at present existing, is in itself a proof that some alteration is needed in the management of the companies. The comfort, health and safety of the passengers is, to a certain extent, looked after by the directors, because they know full well that their receipts would be seriously affected if these were not considered at least to some extent; but it is only where competition comes into play that such considerations are duly acted upon.

ARE SUICIDES INSANE?

The Self Murder of Famous Men Show That a Suicide May be in His Senses.

Is suicide evidence of insanity?

The question has been thrown in discussion not easily handled. The most vital instinct in man is the preservation of life. It would seem therefore that any fact which traverses the first law of nature must emanate from a disordered brain.

Not long since a judge in one of the New York courts ruled that suicide per se was evidence of insanity. On the other hand, we have the examples of eminent men who have taken their own lives under circumstances which appear to leave no room for doubt as to their sanity.

A recent dispatch from Roumania informs us of a suicide club. The members of which are pledged to commit suicide as soon as their names should be drawn. The survivors of any members of the club are all been placed in rigid confinement and will be tried on the charge of having deliberately aided and abetted unjustifiable suicide, says the Albany Express.

It is remarkable how a suicide by a certain method or in a certain place will lead to another of the same kind. A surgeon of the Middlesex Hospital in London went into a barber's shop to be shaved. The barber spoke of a man who had been unsuccessful in an attempt to kill himself by cutting his throat.

"He could easily have managed it," said the surgeon, "had he been acquainted with the situation of the carotid artery."

"Where should he have cut?" asked the barber. The surgeon told him. He at once left the room, and not returning as soon as was expected the surgeon went to look for him and discovered him in the yard with his head nearly severed from his body.

It is worthy of note that the greatest number of suicides are committed on the Christmas. The form of death they choose is usually poisoning.

In every country three-quarters of all the suicides are of the male sex.

It is almost impossible to realize the readiness with which the Chinese commit suicide. It requires the merest trifle to induce a Chinaman to hang himself. In other countries when a man wishes to avenge himself on his enemy he kills him. In China he kills himself.

Suicides of widows are very common there. Many hang themselves publicly, having given notice of their intention so that those who wish may be present.

On the morning of the appointed day the willing victim, dressed in ragged apparel and holding a bouquet of fresh flowers in her hand, is carried in a sedan chair to the temple erected in memory of virtuous and filial widows." There she performs her accustomed religious rites, with burning of candles and incense. In the afternoon she returns home and hangs herself before the multitude. Incidents of this kind meet with general approval in China. They do honor to the families in which they occur.

The first instance of suicide recorded in the Scriptures is that of Samson (Jk C. 1117). The second is that of Saul (B. C. 1055). Rather than fall into the hands of the Philistines, when hard pressed in battle, he drew his sword and fell upon it and so died. Judas Iscariot, through remorse, went and hanged himself.

Among the philosophers of antiquity Seneca stands pre-eminently forward as the defender of suicide. He says: "Does life please you? Live on. Does it not? Go from whence you came. No vast wound is necessary; a mere puncture will secure your liberty." Pliny says: "Death can not end his own life, though he wish, but has given to mortals the best of boons amid the burdens and trials of life."

Two of the most distinguished men of antiquity who sacrificed their own lives were Brutus and Cassius. Mark Antony, realizing his own defeat, ignominiously killed himself. Cleopatra was taken a prisoner by Augustus, who had intended to exhibit her in a triumphal procession in Rome. To frustrate this design she killed herself by the poison of an asp. Cato, rather than live under the despotism of Cæsar, stabbed himself, and when the wound had been stanched, tore off the bandages and accomplished his purpose.

Demosthenes fearful of being subjected to slavery and disgrace, resorted to self-destruction. The poison upon which Demosthenes acted by the Romans impelled him to have recourse to the poison which he always kept about him in a ring. Socrates, the moral philosopher, also, after starved himself to death sooner than submit to the dominion of Philip of Macedon. Thos. Chatterton, the English poet, became indigent to the verge of starvation and at the age of seventeen poisoned himself.

From instances like the foregoing one might well query whether the act of taking one's life is alone sufficient to indicate insanity.

KIT CARSON'S FIGHT.

He Was Driven Up a Tree by Bears and Saved His Life With a Club.

While sojourning at El Paso, Texas, during the early fifties, I had frequent interviews with many of the early and hardy frontier pioneers of that country, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times, and among the most noted was the renowned and daring frontier guide and scout, Kit Carson. He was a man which I had already heard about him and doubted he corroborated substantially. It was as follows. He had started from Taos, N. M., to go to Ft. Davis, in Texas, some 500 miles down the Rio Grande from Santa Fe, N. M., and, as usual, went across the country alone on foot, with only his trusty rifle, two Colt's sixes and belt knife buckled around him, his provision sack and pocket instruments. These excursions being generally made for pleasure and pastime he was never in a great hurry, but spent a great deal of time viewing the country and prospecting for precious metals, etc.

While among the foothills of the Guadalupe mountains, searching through the stunted pines that grew along the base of the mountain, one evening in search of water and a place to camp, he was suddenly aroused from his reveries by the appearance of two monster grizzly bears so close upon him that he had not time to reach for his rifle. It was touch and go, and Kit freely acknowledged that for once in his life he was frightened, and as he expressed it he imagined he could see St. Peter holding the gate "ajar" for him. But being a man of ready perception and rapid execution he proved equal to the occasion and was into the top of a small pine tree so quick as thought, leaving his rifle at the base of the tree to "overawe" the beasts.

But he said he soon perceived to disadvantage that his ruse was "up" as the bears boldly approached the tree and after smelling of the gun awy of them proceeded to climb after the hunter, perched now on a top, some twenty feet from the ground. Kit said that he began to feel like a cornered leopard, with the spots coming on him thicker and fast. It was now no time for "swapping horses," and being full of expedients, he concluded that the best weapon under the circumstances was his bowie knife. By the time the bear had reached near enough to begin the battle Kit had provided himself with a branch from a limb of the tree with a very large and heavy butt end. As soon as the bear's nose got in reach Kit waited till he let slab with such rapidity that the bear was glad to slide down a little and reconsider the matter.

After a moment's rest, however, the bear returned to the charge with such furious energy that Kit involuntarily said to himself: "Mr. Carson, prepare to pass in your checks." The bear's determination seemed to like feeling in Kit, and he came to the defence of "Mr. Carson" with all the energy he possessed. He swung by his left hand to the nearest bough and bolted Mr. Grizzly's nose with such desperate force that the beast spouted blood equal to a forty horse-power engine.

As the bear again retreated down the tree shaking his huge head and roaring like a demon, Kit said he looked upon it with the coolest feelings of satisfaction and looked upon that pine club as the greatest weapon out, especially in such close quarters.

Although expecting each attack to be again renewed by one of the bears, he felt comparatively safe, as his tough green pine club was still good for many more such battles. After the bear had reached the ground, the two seemed to hold a council of war and deliberate over the prospects of capture, but neither seemed disposed to venture up the tree again, the wounded one only looking up at his foe with fiendish eyes of fire and growling in revengeful hatred. The other made several points as though he would try his luck, but as quickly backed down.

These maneuvers were kept up till the sun was getting uncomfortably low and Kit began to feel like being compelled to remain in the tree for the night, but he soon observed with delight that the bears were tiring of their vigil and were showing signs of giving up the contest evidently.

They would trot on together for fifty or a hundred yards and return again, looking up at him and growling as though they had been let down up by the roots. But at last, tiring of this, they finally left on their way until they were out of sight. Calculating that they were a safe miles away when to lost sight of them or their retreat, he felt safe in leaving his unforced imprisonment and seeking some place of greater safety for the night and finding water, which he was not long in doing. He said he had eaten many suppers that he thought could not be surpassed in delicious relish, but that supper on "spinole" and water was the sweetest of his life.

THE FASHION IN HEELS.

The Flighty Dame Has Her Notions About Them.

A venerable and persistent fashion in heels is the habit of wearing them high. Early shoes and boots would appear to have had very slight heels if any at all; but when once the heels began to be made high and stilted, they seem to have become fixed, and has lasted to the present day.

It would be difficult to say exactly when high heels first appeared, but they were worn in England at least as long ago as the early part of the sixteenth century.

The Turkish original was a kind of patten, worn, indoors, to raise the wearer above the dirt.

In the plates to George Sandys' "Travels," a well-known seventeenth-century book, the Turkish women are represented wearing these chopines, or "chioppinos," as writers called them.

In Venice, they were in very common use. They were made of wood, covered with leather of different colors and were often curiously stitched and embroidered.

They were worn absurdly high, some being raised eighteen inches from the ground, the degree of nobility being indicated by the height of the chopino.

On stilts of this kind, unassisted walking naturally became no easy task, and hence was seen the ridiculous spectacle of a lady supported on either side by attendants, when she went abroad, so that she might not fall.

The word "chopino" was supposed by our older writers to be of Italian origin, and was thought to come from and to the plural choppini, as if a genuine Italian word. But, strangely enough, notwithstanding the fashion that undoubtedly prevailed at Venice, the word does not appear in Italian dictionaries. It is probably of Spanish origin.

The modern Spanish chapin means a clog with a cork sole. Hamlet alludes to these exalted pattens in his welcome to the players when he says: "By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine."

This shows that the high heeled fashionable foot-wear was familiar to Elizabethan Englishmen; but its influence in the shape of high-heeled shoes had long before been felt in that country.

At the Tudor Exhibition held recently in London, there were to be seen shoes worn by Queen Mary at the famous meeting of the Field of the Cloth of Gold. They were of velvet, beautifully embroidered, and had silver edges and pretty high heels. Some shoes worn by the unfortunate Anne Boleyn were also shown; and their heels were decidedly high.

Another exhibit was a pair of shoes formerly belonging to Queen Elizabeth, which she left at Northlam, in Sussex, where on one occasion she dined on the village green on her way to Rye. The heels of her majesty's shoes were very high.

In Elizabethan times corked shoes were much worn, the cork thickening towards the heel. In an old comedy, "Old Fortes," printed in 1615, a lady who inquires: "Why the citizen's wear all corks in their shoes?" is told: "'Tis Madam, to keep up the coolness of the city, only to be lightheeled."

During the reigns of Elizabeth's immediate successors heels increased in height. In King James' days, or in the early years of Charles's reign, before political troubles and civil war drove dandyism out of sight, and almost out of existence, many years a fop delighted to exhibit his white silk stockings, embroidered with elaborate "clocks" in a variety of colors, above shoes with heels away at each corner and of proportions.

Some thirty years ago the friend, who was in financial straits, asked Mr. Dashan to endorse a note for $1,000 which he did. The note was protested and Mr. Dashan was compelled to pay the money. The letter just received stated that the sender could not look the sun, and when Mr. Dashan's whereabouts were ascertained he received a check for the amount with accumulated interest.

HOOSIER NEWS.

Items of Interest From Different Parts of the State.

The Brookville American is making a collection of old state bank bills.

A new bank, with $25,000 capital, will soon be established at Converse.

Rice M. Brown, of Mitchell, is dead. He was a soldier in the Mexican war.

Many sections of the state complain that grubworms are seriously damaging the timothy meadows.

There is a vigorous protest against the threatened discontinuance of the postoffice at Culver station.

The populists of Dubois, Orange and Lawrence counties have nominated George T. Mayfield, of Orange, for joint representative.

The franchise of the Elwood Electric Street Railway company has been repealed, owing to the failure of capitalists to take hold of the venture.

John P. Foster, near Mitchell, was killed in a runaway accident, his skull being crushed. His wife was also thrown out, but escaped serious hurt.

While a back load of people were en route from Knightstown to Shelbyville the vehicle was overturned and several were severely injured. Henry Frederick had an arm broken and J. M. Barrett's nose was fractured.

Louis Kleespies, of Jeffersonville, who undertook to establish a saloon at Fairmount against the overwhelming sentiment of the people, has returned to his old home. He reports that he was waited upon by a body of masked men, who seemed so terribly in earnest, that he concluded it was wise to leave.

Isiah W. Krider, a prominent farmer of Bethlehem township, Cass county, objected to the betrothal of his charming daughter, Elsie, to Ellsworth Morrow, a reputable young neighbor, and leaving a message for his family that he "would meet them in heaven," he mysteriously disappeared. He was traced to Indianapolis, where the trail was lost.

Two highwaymen, laughing and talking, sauntered up to Ed Mills, of Mills Bros., of South Bend., as he was hastening homeward, and, catching him unawares, one of them struck him a violent blow. Mills staggered but failed to fall. Two minutes later both highwaymen had been satisfactorily whipped. Mills, however, was blinded with blood which flowed down his face and could give but indifferent pursuit. Because of this the rascals escaped.

At Harlowe and Gus Albright, of Spartlown, a suburb of Michigan City, rivals in the affection of Flo McCarty, met at the home of their inoramata, and a fight ensued. Albright knocked Harlow down, the latter falling in a tub of hot water in which Miss McCarthy was preparing to bathe her feet. Regaining the perpendicular Harlow used his knife, plunging the blade into Albright's neck and severing two small arteries, from which he narrowly escaped bleeding to death.

Mrs. Augusta Schmidt, of Cass county, has brought suit in Howard county against H. C. Davis, administrator of the estate of the late Mrs. Christina Hooper, in his individual capacity, claiming property and damages altogether aggregating $22,500 due her as the niece and adopted daughter of the deceased. It is alleged that prior to her death Mrs. Hooper gave plaintiff $15,000 and the contents of a box, all of which was seized by the administrator. This is the second suit by Mrs. Schmidt, the court holding that Davis could not be sued in his representative capacity.

Daniel Friday accumulated valuable property in Howard county and established a private bank at Flora, then his mind became unbalanced and he was committed to an asylum. Upon his release he removed to Chicago, and upon another attempt to have him restrained he claimed that he was being persecuted, and immediately set sail for Germany, where he was again placed under restraint. Recently an attempt was made to appoint a guardian for his property in this state and to collect $3,000 back rents, but the guardianship is being resisted on the ground that the court cannot appoint for a person outside the state. As a result, Friday's monetary affairs are much entangled.
